Hello, EHS people!

Just a quick voice message, to share my thoughts on where we are, about this recurring term "invisible disability". It's like the snake biting it's own tail. Yes, EHS is invisible. So people don't believe us. So we keep a low profile. So we suffer in silence. So no one knows. So if we talk about it, they don't believe us. There are lots of ways of making ourselves visible. Of course, the whole body garment, "even the head", is radical. But I know it's not easy to bear it, when you find yourself physically alone in that outfit in the public space or in social situations.

Many people don't even go out anymore. That's what invisibility is all about.

Watch - 3mn20

Avoiding socializing, so as not to get sick like a dog, or risk a more serious accident. Before I had EHS, I'd practically disappeared from the Internet. I never imagined I'd be back on Facebook, posting on the net.

But if we stay hidden, if we keep quiet, if we continue to keep a low profile, who's going to help us or stand for us? And yet, we're running out of time. If it goes on like this, we'll all soon be camping out, in the middle of nowhere, off the grid, and we won't be able to reach each other.

With EMP Victims, we launched a one-minute video testimonial campaign. The theme is "Coming out of invisibility together". Some 30 people have already taken part, by sending in their video. And for the most of us, we are all shy, we are all afraid of ridicule, of being judged, of not being able... We are not Barbies or Kens, we don't look like trendy Instagramers. I'm far from being a bimbo, with my little glasses and my grey hair. But it doesn't matter. Our situation is really critical. And I have the feeling that, in a while, it'll be too late. We'll really be gone.

We can't quibble anymore. I encourage you to add your testimony to ours.

Please, feel free to contact me for any technical help you may need, or to help you prepare your text. I recorded mine 40 times before I didn't babble.

For those who know me as Rosalito, I am Agnes Forette and you can contact me on Facebook.

I hope this message will give you ideas, and help you decide to take the plunge.

We are social beings

We are social beings.

And still, our priority for survival is to manage to flee people. Because we've become allergic to environmental electromagnetic pollution.

And because one of the greatest sources of this pollution, that damages us, SMARTPHONE, is in every pocket.

From Silence to Strenght

Global stories of EMF Sensitivity

Interview by Keith CUTTER

Watch - 44mn

April 30, 2025

Original video description: "What began as a European initiative—an effort to help elected officials and doctors understand that synthetic EMF is incompatible with organic biology—has become something much more. It's now a global movement, with over 3,250 signatories and 18 video testimonies that are capturing attention around the world. What makes this effort different? No intermediaries. You see and hear directly from those affected. EHS victims speaking for themselves—in their own words, in short one-minute videos. Together, these messages paint a vivid picture of what it means to live with EHS in the 21st century. One week later, now 31 video testimonies. See link below.

"My life turned upside down in 2022, when I switched on a new WIFI. In an instant, I became electro hyper sensitive. We no longer have access to normal life, to public spaces, to doctors, to dentists, hospitals, healthcare.

13 months ago, a new antenna was added 1km away from my home. Since then I've been locked down in my kitchen. It is my only safe place, and yet, I consider myself lucky to be able to spend the winter in the warmth of my home. I have a special thought for my fellow EHS who fled to the woods in precarious shelters, in cars, in caravans... the so-called "EMF refugees" whom nobody cares about. This is a real disgrace. For all these reasons, to save my life, in solidarity with those who suffer, I signed the Appeal "Electro hyper Sensitivity is a Humanitarian Emergency".

HIGHLIGHT ON TORITO

Learning from The Spanish Blackout

Keith CUTTER & Peter TORITO

Watch - 12mn

Original video description: "On April 28, 2025, a massive power outage swept across mainland Portugal and peninsular Spain, leaving large regions without electricity for nearly 10 hours. In Zaragoza —the fourth-largest city in Spain— my friend Peter immediately recognized the significance of the blackout. As a seasoned observer of electromagnetic radiation, he began capturing radiation levels and documenting what unfolded. He mentioned that some people seemed to have voice and SMS (text) capability, although no mobile data ability.

This short video highlights my three critical takeaways from Peter's work that day:

- 1. During normal conditions, background radiation from wireless infrastructure is extreme—far exceeding what's necessary for voice and text. When the power went out, radiation levels dropped dramatically, yet basic communication continued.*
- 2. As mobile internet failed, phones began emitting powerful bursts of RF radiation while searching for service—an invisible storm of involuntary transmissions.*
- 3. Most revealing of all, once the data stream was cut, people began talking to each other again. Normal, real-world social interaction resumed almost instantly.*

The lesson?

Our wireless world depends on an invisible but ever-present fog of radiation that easily penetrates into our homes--never proven to be without harm."

" We are at war against an invisible enemy. I am one of the nameless victims of telephone antennas, WIFI, Bluetooth, cell phones and other wireless junk.

The radiation they emit is odorless, invisible and soundless without a good meter. Because of all this, I've become electro hypersensitive and I've been suffering since 2012. I can no longer work or have friends. I can't travel, I have no leisure, I can't go to the beach or to the pool. Antennas are everywhere, and everyone carries a cell phone that makes me sick. I am under crossfire from the ennemy. I have to wear a Faraday suit to get out of my shielded house. All living things suffer. In this park, there are no bees or butterflies left, no birds or crickets sing anymore. Only a post-apocalyptic silence."
